

A brief profile:

Ramesh Chandra Chaudhury, the youngest son of Late Brindabati Das and Keshab Chandra Das, received his early education in Guwahati and later studied engineering at Jadavpur, West Bengal. After working briefly for the Government of Assam and a German engineering company, Manriesman, he showed courage and vision by becoming an entrepreneur at a time when it was uncommon and challenging to do so. His journey to become a successful entrepreneur is a good example for others to follow.

He was not only an industrialist but also a philanthropist. He supported education by funding institutions like Brindabati Das Girls' High School at Mirza, Kamrup district and, played a major role in the establishment and development of K.C. Das Commerce College in Guwahati. From 1983 to 1996, he provided financial support and guidance to the College as a Member, Treasurer, and President of its Governing Body. Known as a father figure, he earned deep respect from the college community for his positive attitude.

To honour his contributions to the society, K. C. Das Commerce College organizes the Ramesh Chandra Chaudhury Memorial North-East Regional Level Debate Competition, keeping his legacy alive among younger generations.
